ALEXANDRIA, VA., MONDAY EVENING JULY 30, 1888.

NO. 179.

MEDICINAL.

WARM WAVES

Are rolling in. You can't escape them; but you can escape the sleepless nights, loss of appetite, and languid feeling that result from draining the nervous force by muscular or mental exertion in summer's torrid days. The Compound, that great strengthener of the nervous system, and fortify it against the attacks of preparation is a medicinal combination of benefit to body and brain, and has brought new life to the nerves of the body, especially valuable at this season, when feeble persons are especially liable to be attacked by the heat of the season, which moves the liability to this dread disease. If you feel the effects of summer's heat, you can't afford to delay another day before gaining the vitality only obtained by the use of this great medicine. Sold by Druggists, $1.00, Six for $5.00. Send for eight-page paper, with many testimonials.

Rescued from the Well.

John Anderson was released from his ten days' imprisonment in the well at Johnstown, Neb., on Saturday. Over one hundred feet of lumber were used in the construction of the framework by means of which he was rescued. He was perfectly cheerful throughout, in spite of his terrible situation, and directed the work of the other men. It was hoped that he would be rescued Friday, but when the sun went down it was found impossible to get light to him so that he could see to work. It was accordingly decided to wait for daylight. His supper was sent down to him, together with a blanket to sleep on, and words of mutual encouragement were exchanged. Anderson and the brave men who were working to save him parted for the night. At daylight the work was resumed with renewed courage and determination. A box, 18 inches long and 10 by 11 inches square, open at both ends and thoroughly soaked inside, was lowered to the boards that were protecting him. In this covering a hole was cut and the box was slipped through. At ten o'clock Anderson, after pulling off his clothes, tied a rope under his arms and, holding his hands straight above his head, was pulled through the box and finally released from his prison. Before raising him to the open air his clothes were put on and stimulants were administered. After reaching the top of the ground he took hands with his rescuers and tried to thank them, but could only say, "God bless you, boys," when his voice was choked. There were two hundred people present, and there were very few dry eyes among them. He was at once carried to the farm house and placed under the care of two physicians. They say he will soon be restored to health. Although the effects of his terrible experience are quite visible he does not look so emaciated as was expected. After he was taken into the house the crowd gave three cheers for Henry Archer and George Campbell, the men who took him from the well. They were so overcome with fatigue and joy that when the crowd began congratulating them they were like children. The sympathy naturally called out by such a situation was intensified in this new country, where by force of circumstances every settler is a neighbor, and for the last ten days business in Johnstown and Ainsworth and on the farms have been practically suspended. So intense was the excitement and anxiety that farmers left their fields and merchants their stores and flocked to the scene of the accident. Every day supplies were sent to the workers from private residences and stores, and the women were unceasing in their kindly efforts. But, although the rescuing party did all in their power, Anderson would never have been saved but for his own efforts. He planned and directed the work during the last two days. While unceasing in his own efforts he was encouraging the men by his cheerful words when they were almost ready to despair.

A MEAN BOARDING MISTRESS.—Mrs.
Anna Gibson, the young bride of a printer, with her husband, boarding at the residence of Mrs. Carr, of Philadelphia, when dressing to go out mislaid her bustle, and in looking about for something to answer its purpose decided to improvise one out of a couple of the bedsheets, which, unfortunately as it turned out, "belonged to the house." In a few minutes she was rigged and sailed out on the street perfectly satisfied with her appearance. After she had gone out the landlady entered Mrs. Gibson's room and missed her sheets. As the young couple were strangers to her, she notified the officer on the beat of the "theft" and requested him to arrest Mrs. Gibson on sight. Along in the day he met her at Vine and Nineteenth streets and asked her to accompany him to the police station. Mrs. Gibson was dumb-founded, but went. At the station she was made acquainted with the charge against her, and then she laughed and "acknowledged the corn." The sergeant said that there had been no intentional wrong done by Mrs.
Gibson, but Mrs. Carr refusing to withdraw the charge he consigned the very much frightened and now weeping lady to one of his cleanest cells. When her husband came home he was informed in no gentle terms of his wife's conduct and of her whereabouts.
He at once ran to the rescue of his wife, and, much to his surprise, he was collared, and also put into a cell, because Mrs. Carr filed a complaint against him, charging him with conspiring with his wife to rob her house. The young couple had to remain all night in their cells and it was morning before the police could prevail on Mrs. Carr to withdraw her charges, for they were plainly an outrage upon innocent people. After their release it is superfluous to state that Mr. and Mrs. Gibson went to a better boarding place instantly.
